

HOT AND NEW

COOL STUFF

✓ SIMRAD HALO Fishos; are you sick of squinting at the horizon for white blotches which may or may not be birds? Well how about a radar that can find flocks of birds from miles away. Yep, it's called Bird-finder mode and the new Simrad HALO Pulse Compression Radar has it.

RRP $7,150.00 +

✓ CANON EOS 7D MK II If you like to photograph marlin jumping out of the water, birds swooping down on baitfish or maybe just your kid's soccer game, then the EOS 7D Mark II is your baby. This new release from Canon has a 65-point all cross-type auto focus system – meaning, it focuses damn fast. It also shoots quick too, with the ability to capture 31 RAW frames at ten frames per second.

◀ RAYMARINE Is that a sunken ship or a swarm of jellyfish? Maybe it's just a fish after all. Sigh. Sick of second guessing your pixelated sonar readings? Well, Raymarine have just added seven new Dragonfly products to their range. Using wide-spectrum CHIRP technology anglers are now said to expect "photo-like images of fish and underwater objects". Also joining the range is Wi-Fish, which lets anglers view, pause and rewind sonar imagery from their smartphones and tablets..

▲ MAKO EYEWEAR GTS Are you sick of being mocked for wearing your fishing sunglasses out in public? Tired of making up excuses like, "They're polarized" and "I bet they have more anti-reflective coatings than your servo sunnies". Well worry no more. Mako Eyewear have just released the GT range, which look just as awesome off the boat, as they do on it.
